REPORT CARD ON THE STABILITY OF THE U.S. MATERNAL AND CHILD HEALTH CARE SYSTEM

The preterm birth rate among U.S. babies has risen 15 percent since 2000, according to a new report from the U.S. Surgeon General.

Preterm babies are at a higher risk of health problems, including respiratory distress, hearing loss, and developmental delays. The report also notes that the rate of preterm births has increased in every state, with the largest increases seen in the South and West.

The report is part of a series of reports from the Surgeon General's Office on the state of the U.S. health care system. The reports are intended to provide information to policymakers and the public about the strengths and weaknesses of the system and to identify areas for improvement.
