

ROSEY 1015

 Share on Facebook

 Share on Twitter

ThinkStock

UNDERGROUND ECOÚ

Sproule says companies in the underground economy may hire a younger worker who “might be making somewhere between $70 and $100 a day and typically that’s for at least a 10-hour day. There’s no overtime out there for these workers. They’re being exploited.”

A tradesman that’s well versed could be making upwards of $125 to $200 a day, but there’s no overtime, there’s no healthcare and there’s no coverage if they have an on-the-job accident.