

Lincoln Wo

Schmidt is, perhaps, best known for his role in the 2008 presidential campaign of Sen. McCain and his decision to recruit former Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin as the vice-presidential candidate - one of the most egregious political blunders in presidential campaign history.

Schmidt, it was revealed, had sought a major role in the Trump campaign in 2016, but was rebuffed by the candidate who, it was reported, found him "untrustworthy." It was one of the few moments of prescience exhibited by Trump.

As often occurs in times of crisis and controversy, the principals have turned on one another. Conway, responding to the leak of private e-mails from another founder, Jennifer Horn, warned his former colleagues and partners they had violated Federal law and could be held liable. hb

Horn, in her resignation, described a work environment riddled with demeaning, sexist and misogynistic behavior while her ex-partners responded by accusing her of attempt