Galloway, N.J. - President Donald Trump in the first two months of his administration has not won over New Jersey residents, majorities of whom disapprove of his performance and actions so far, according to a Stockton University Poll released today.

Only 35 percent of New Jersey adults have a very favorable or somewhat favorable view of the new president, with 56 percent viewing him unfavorably, including 46 percent very unfavorably. Eight percent are unsure. His job performance numbers in the Garden State are even lower, with only 26 percent saying he is doing a good or excellent job as president. Seventy percent think Trump is doing a fair job (24 percent) or is doing poorly (47 percent).

Fifty-four percent think the country is on the wrong track, while 37 percent think the United Respondents across political parties disapprove of the Republican-controlled Congress' handling of one of Trump's signature issues, repeal of the American Care Act, or Obamacare. Only 13 percent think Congress has done a good job, including 2 percent rating it as excellent. A majority (53 percent) rate it as poor, and 29 percent say Congress has done a fair job. The negative ratings cut across party lines. Asked what they would like Trump and Congress to do on Obamacare, 71 percent want to keep the parts of the law that work and fix what doesn't
