Galloway Twp., NJ – The College Foundation of The Richard Stockton College of New Jersey is actively pursuing corporate and individual event sponsorships and auction item donations for its 28th Annual Scholarship Benefit Gala on Saturday, April 12. The event will take place at Caesars Atlantic City and features entertainment by celebrity comedian Howie Mandel, a cocktail reception and a gourmet dinner. Sponsors and donors of auction items will help provide educational opportunities for deserving students.

Last year's auction items included an array of fine jewelry, art, dinners, hotel accommodations, sports memorabilia, golf outings, gift baskets, gift certificates, event tickets, even LASIK eye surgery. "Donations for the benefit are limited only by the donor's imagination," said Marilyn DiGiacobbe, Chief Development Officer of the College and Executive Director of the Foundation. "One of the items will be auctioned off by none other than Howie Mandel himself." In addition to helping a fine cause, businesses, restaurants and individuals have the opportunity to showcase products and services to an upscale audience.

This year's Benefit Gala is hosted by Honorary Chairman J. Carlos Tolosa, Eastern Division President of Harrah's Operating Company, Inc., and Chairperson for the event, Dr. James Yoh, President and CEO of Galaxy Technology LLC. All proceeds from the event will benefit student scholarships at Stockton.

To become a sponsor or to donate items for the auction, call (609) 652-4658 for more information or log onto www.stockton.edu/benefit.
